WETZLAR, June 1.

THE 28th of last Month, at Two in the Morning, we were greatly alarmed by the sudden Arrival of two Bodies of Troops, one coming from Darmstadt, the other from Giessen, consisting of 2 Regiments of Infantry, 4 Battalions of Militia, and 600 Horse and Hussars, together with a Train of 36 Pieces of Cannon. These Troops were no sooner arrived before the Town, than they forced open the Gates, took Possession of all the principal Streets, and broke open the Houses of the Burgher Masters, and of the Senators, who were obliged to appear before a Deputation sent by his Serene Highness the Hangrave of Hesse Darmstadt. Several Houses have actually from 70 to 80 Officers quartered on them, and no Body has Leave to go out of the Town, except the Post: Even the Members of the Imperial Chamber have not this Liberty.

The Hangrave's Pretext for treating this Town in the same Manner is, that the Magistrates refused to give the Satisfaction which his Serene Highness required, relating to the Quarrels that arose soon after the Conclusion of the Peace, between his Troops, and a Detachment of those of the Allied Army, escorted by the Soldiery of this City, in which the former were repulsed. Several Burghers are accused of having assisted the Allies; and his Serene Highness insists, that the Magistrates, and several of the Senators, should be Officers.

This Morning the Imperial Chamber was assembled; but it is not known yet what Resolution they have taken.

Hamburgh, June 31. Yesterday arrived here a Sloop from Ireland, which, we hear, has brought a considerable Sum of Money, to discharge the Arrears owing by England to the King of Prussia.

We hear from Aylesbury that on Saturday, his Majesty's Birth-day, their worthy Representative, John Wilkes, Esq; came to that Town. He was met by the most considerable Inhabitants of that and the neighbouring Towns, and conducted to his own House amidst the Acclamations of an infinite Number of People. He afterwards gave a grand Entertainment to the Gentlemen of the Borough, and all the Public Houses were opened for the Reception of his Friends. The following are said to be the Toasts drank at the White Hart:

June 18. It is said Orders will speedily be issued by the Ministry to the Board of Ordnance, to provide a Number of Engineers, and other Persons, properly qualified, in order to be sent for America, to make accurate Surveys of all our Colonies, from the River St. Lawrence to the Gulph of Mexico, and from the Sea to the Mississippi; and likewise of all our West-India Islands; and to draw Plans and Views of all the Towns, Forts, Rivers, Lakes, Creeks, Mountains, Woods, &c. and to procure an ample Discription of the Inhabitants, their Manners, Customs, and Genius; the Climates, with the Nature and Quality of the Soils of the different Provinces; the Animals peculiar to them; what Rivers they are watered by, whether navigable, and what Species of Fish they are stored with; whether the Lands are proper for Grain or Pasture, for Sugar, Rice, Tobacco, Cotton, or Indigo; if there are any Mines of Gold, Silver, Copper, Iron, Lead, or Coal, and if their Produce will extract the Expence of working them; if the Forests are proper for building of Ships or Habitations, or adapted to the making of Houshold Furniture, or other Utensils; with a particular Account of the Square Miles, and Number of Souls in each District.——It is thought they will set out the ensuing Summer, and Orders will be at the same Time sent to our Governors, to give them all Manner of Assistance, and furnish them with Guides and Interpreters. This is a noble Plan, and the most effectual Way of improving to the utmost not only our new Conquests, but our ancient Possessions; and, spite of all the Efforts of Faction, must immortalize the Administration of a Nobleman, whose only Ambition is to make Britain flourish, and her Subjects happy.

NEW-YORK, August 29.

A just Relation of Col. BOUQUET's Engagement with the Indians, near Fort PITT.

IT is with great Satisfaction we can acquaint the Public, of the Arrival of Col. BOUQUET, with the Troops under his Command, at Fort PITT, on the 10th Instant, after having totally routed a very considerable Body of Indians, who attacked his Little Army on the Fifth and Sixth, near Bushy-run; the Largeness of the Convoy, and Night coming on, prevented the Colonel from pursuing the Savages the 5th Day; And the next Morning the Indians renewed the first Day; And the next Morning the Indians renewed the Attack, with great Fierceness; but Col. Bouquet had made such a Disposition for their Reception as succeeded to his utmost Wishes; the Troops, at a proper Time, rushing on the most Villains, with their fixed Bayonets, and following their Blow with an Intrepidity that at once completed the Route, which became general, and our Troops pursued the Savages for a considerable Distance, wounding many in the Flight: It is imagined that at least Sixty of the Savages were slain in the two Encounters; and it is certain that Keekyuskung, one of the first Ringleaders of the Mischief in those Parts, is among the Dead, his Body being well known: The Wolf is likewise supposed to be killed, his Rifle having been found; and Butler, another of the Chiefs, was killed at Fort Pitt.

This great and seasonable Defeat, has not been accomplished without Loss on our Side; altho' there never were Troops that behaved with more Coolness, Firmness, and real Resolution, it being remarkable, that not a Man discovered the least Confusion. Capt. Lieut. Graham, and Lieut. James M'Intosh, of the 42d, and Lieut. Randall, of the Rangers, are killed; Capt. John Graham, and Lieut. Duncan Campbell, of the 42d; Lieut. James Dow, of the 60th; Lieut. Donald Campbell, and Volunteer Peebles, of the 77th, are wounded; and we have left in the whole Forty-nine Men. Some of the Brutes were scalped by the Pack-Horse Men, and Rangers; but the Regular Troops would not touch the Bodies after they were dead: Their whole Attention was to execute their Duty in pursuing the Runaways, which they did, till it was judged necessary to order them to Stop.

Col. Bouquet continued his March to Fort Pitt, the Indians firing some random Shots, but never daring to face the Troops again: On his Arrival at Fort Pitt, he learnt that the Savages had closely beset that Post, from the 27th July to the 1st Instant, when they marched in a Body to attack him; and these very Villains had, on the 26th July, made a Speech to the Commanding Officer at Fort Pitt, couched in the most deceitful and treacherous Terms imaginable, pretending Friendship, while, at the same Time, it was very evident they meant nothing less than to have butchered every Woman and Infant, that had taken Shelter in the Place, with the same Pleasure they would have put the Garrison to Torture, if they had had an Opportunity of doing it; but the Commanding Officer, with a becoming Spirit, answered their Speech accordingly, disdaining to treat with Villains, who had given so many Proofs of their Ingratitude and Dissimulation.

"Friday last, at 2 o'Clock in the Afternoon, Capt. Basset, an Engineer, arrived here from Pittsburgh, Express to his Excellency Sir Jeffery Amherst, which Place he left the 13th Instant: The Accounts brought by him, we hear, are as follow, viz. That on the 5th Instant, in the Evening, the Troops under the Command of Col. Bouquet, amounting to about 460, were attacked by 400 Indians, within a Mile and an Half of a Place called Bushy-Run (26 Miles from Pittsburgh) the most convenient for an Attack on all that Road; but after a smart Fire for some Time, Night obliged both Parties to withdraw. That on the Morning of the 6th, by Break of Day, the Engagement was renewed again by the Indians; that they advanced on our People with the greatest Undauntedness, but met with a Reception contrary to their Expectations, and were soon convinced they had People to cope with that understood Bush-fighting as well as themselves: Notwithstanding which, the Engagement continued till Ten o'Clock, very smart and bloody, many being killed and wounded on both Sides, the Indians still continuing to behave with uncommon Bravery; but two Companies of Light Infantry having found Means to surround them, they soon found themselves between two Fires, when they immediately gave Way, and fled with the greatest Precipitation imaginable, leaving killed on the Field of Battle 40 of their best Warriors, among which Number was a Sachem, called Keekyuskung, that had been often well treated at Pittsburgh. Our Men pursued the Savages two Miles, but could take only one Prisoner, and after a little Examination he received his Quietus. Our Army did not scalp one of the Indians, not thinking it prudent to delay Time, but proceeded on to the Relief of the Garrison, where they arrived, with all their wounded Men, and Supplies, the 10th following.

In the two Engagements above-mentioned, we had Capt. Lieut. Graham, and Lieut. M'Intosh, of the Highlanders, with a Lieutenant of the Rangers, killed; and Lieutenant Dow, wounded; besides 40 Privates killed, and 60 wounded. The Waggoners and several other People that followed the Army, scalped most of the Enemy that were left in the Field; and the Indians the Night following the Action returned and scalped as many of our People as they could find. The 10th, the Indians crossed the Ohio, in Sight of Pittsburgh, when they gave 30 Scalp Yells, to denote the Number of Scalps they had taken.

We are told Lieut. Dow shot two Indians before he received his Wound, and broke the Thigh of a Third afterwards.

We are also told, the Indian Army was composed of 8 different Nations, and as Braddock, and Grant were surprised on that Road, they expected to have served Col. Bouquet in the same Manner; but thank God they have been disappointed, and we hope the Province of Pennsylvania will reap the Sweets thereof, and many be convinced, that Indians are no more invulnerable than other Men, when attacked on equal Terms, and especially by British Troops.

We hope soon to be able to give the Public a better Account of this Affair; as also some agreeable Advices from the Detachment that is gone to the Relief of Detroit, commanded by Capt. Dalzell."

We hear that the Bodies of all the People who were unfortunately drowned last Week, in crossing the Ferry to Staten-Island, as mention'd in our last, have been since found.

On Monday last the Bodies of Messrs. James Anderson, and N. Chapman, and on Tuesday Mr. Robert Kennedy, were buried at Richmond Church Staten Island; also on Monday the Bodies of Mr. James Morrison, and Mr. David Gammell, and on Tuesday Mr. De Lege were buried on Constable Point, New Jersey, and Mrs. Reynolds at Trinity Church in this City; the Negro Boy has also been found and buried, and we have just heard Mrs. Henderson is also found.

PHILADELPHIA, September 1.

Extract of a Letter from Fort Pitt, August 12.

"The Troops, under Col. Bouquet, arrived here the Day before Yesterday. They were briskly attacked by about 400 Savages for Part of two Days, about 25 Miles from this Place, on a long Ridge, where there was not a Drop of Water to be had; you may judge then the Condition our poor People were in: Notwithstanding which, and many other Disadvantages, our Men bravely beat them off, and in the last Push totally routed the vile Miscreants; but as you will probably have the Accounts of these Engagements from the Gentlemen that were in them, I shall say no more than this, that it is the general Opinion, the Troops behaved with the utmost Intrepidity, and the Indians were never known to behave so fiercely. You may be sure the Sight of the Troops was very agreable to our poor Garrison, being penned up in the Fort from the 29th of May to the 9th Instant, and the Barrack Rooms crammed with Men, Women and Children, tho' providentially no other Disorder ensued than the Small-pox. From the 26th of June to the 28th of July, we were pestered with the Enemy; sometimes with their Flags, demanding Conferences; at other Times threatening, then soothing, and offering their cordial Advice, for us to evacuate the Place; for that they, the Delawares, tho' our dear Friends and Brothers, could no longer protect us from the Fury of Legions of other Nations, that were coming from the Lakes, &c. to destroy us. But finding that neither had any Effect on us, they mustered their whole Force, in Number about 400, and began a most furious Fire from all Quarters on the Fort, which they continued for four Days, and great Part of the Nights, viz. from the 28th of July to the 1st. Our Commander was wounded by an Arrow in the Leg, and no other Person, of any Note, hurt, tho' the Balls were whistling very thick about our Ears. Nine Rank and File wounded, and one Hulings having his Leg broke, was the whole of our Loss during this hot Firing; tho' we have Reason to think that we killed several of our loving Brethren, notwithstanding their Alertness in skulking behind the Banks of the Rivers, &c. These Gentry, seeing they could not take the Fort, sheered off, and we heard no more of them till the Account of the above Engagements came to hand, when we were convinced that our good Brothers did us this second Act of Friendship. What they intend next God knows, but am afraid they will disperse in small Parties, among the Inhabitants, if not well defended. We have no late Accounts from Detroit, but hope soon to hear of an important Blow being struck by the Troops lately sent there. The most of the Troops lately come up, are to set out this Day for Ligonier, to escort Artillery, Stores, &c. from thence here. We expect more Troops from your Parts soon. Nothing can be undertaken to annoy the Savages till they come."

Extract of another Letter from Fort Pitt, of the same Date with the above.

"Our little Army, encumbered with a very large Convoy, was furiously attacked on the 5th and 6th Instant, by the main Body of the Indians, at a Place near Bushy Run, very advantageously chosen by a savage Enemy, being surrounded on every Side by rising Grounds, excepting one, and on that by a Morass; but, by the Intrepidity and Coolness of our Men, they were put to Flight, but not without great Loss on both Sides. We formed a Circle round our Convoy and Wounded; upon which the Savages collected themselves, and continued hooping and popping at us all the Evening. Next Morning, having mustered all their Force, they began the War-hoop, attacking us in Front, when the Colonel feigned a Retreat, which encouraged the Indians to an eager Pursuit, while the Light Infantry and Grenadiers rushed out on their Right and Left Flanks, attacking them where they little expected it; by which Means a great Number of them were killed; and among the rest Keekyuskung, a Delaware Chief, who the Night before, and that Morning, had been Blackguarding us in English. We lost one Man in the Rear, on our March the Day after."

In other Letters from Fort Pitt, it is mentioned that, to a Man, they were resolved to defend the Garrison (if the Troops had not arrived) as long as any Ammunition, and Provision to support them, was left; and that then they would have fought their Way through, or died in the Attempt, rather than have been made Prisoners by such perfidious, cruel, and Blood-thirsty Hell-hounds. Some of the Women in the Fort, it is said helped to defend the Place. Many Expresses, going to and from the Garrison, have been killed.

From Fort Bedford we have Advice, that a scouting Party of Col. Stephen's Volunteers on the Virginia Frontier, towards Winchester, lately fell in with a Party of Indians on Patowmack, about 25 Miles from Fort Cumberland, and routed them, killing and scalping One, wounding several and recovering two Prisoners, and three Scalps, taken four Days before; they took from the Enemy four Rifles, as many Horses as were reckoned worth One Hundred Pounds, and a great Deal of other Plunder; and all without having a Man killed or wounded. We also learn from Bedford, that almost all the Grain, within ten Miles of that Place was reaped and stacked.
